

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13, 1869.

Tensorial Travels. Not many days ago about six thousand dollars worth of human hair was stolen from a prominent "human hair establishment" in Cincinnati.

As late Saturday, a well-known tensorial artist called upon Chief Kelso, at the Central Police Office, and informed him that the capillary cargo had been offered him for sale.

Mr. Kelso thereupon detailed a number of detectives to recover the property. After ferreting around for some time, they yesterday pounced upon a woman named Julia Lehan and two men named Jacob Urt and Jacob Lampert in East Broadway, and discovered in their possession about half the amount of the spoils.

The strength of capillary attraction was never more perfectly illustrated. Neither was the fact that crime and commerce to a certain extent implicate one another. The modern belle will have her hair, or rather she will have hair this is not hers, but came off the head of some one else.

The modern artist in wig-making, who has a big rent to pay, must raise the stamps by fair means or foul. The East Broadway lady who yesterday arrested is no worse than scores of other dealers in false fronts, &c., as yet detected.

She struck the gloomy corridors of the Mulberry street forced-recocho with her squeals, and slung around her own hair in the most reckless manner on being charged with having received the stolen locks of other people, "well knowing them to have been stolen."

If a demolished waterfall is an evidence of repentance, Mrs. Lehan has already made ample atonement. She had not been five minutes in the lock-up before her shame was manifest in the ruins of her shattered chignon and from the way she shrieked it was evident she regretted having proceeded upon Mrs. Glass' principle of "first catching your hair."

The Wall Street Bull-Batter. The enemies of Mr. Fisk swear that he was once a lion-tamer in Van Amburgh's menagerie, and served a considerable time in "stirring up the animals." If this be so, the versatility which leads him to spend the morning among the bulls and bears and lame ducks of Wall street, and the evening around the tinsel glare of the theatre, is easily accounted for.

Mr. Greeley as a Swenrist. It is one of the most difficult things in the world to make one who knows Mr. Greeley only through his journalistic and political reputation believe that he is an accomplished swenrist, and can dash expletives about in the most bewildering style of art.

To-day at 1 o'clock P. M., M. T. Tinsington, musical director at the Grand Opera House, takes a benefit there. The performance is to be miscellaneous, and Madame Ponsi, who is living in retirement, is to play "Peg Woffington," in "Mist and Faces!"

Amusements. To-day at 1 o'clock P. M., M. T. Tinsington, musical director at the Grand Opera House, takes a benefit there. The performance is to be miscellaneous, and Madame Ponsi, who is living in retirement, is to play "Peg Woffington," in "Mist and Faces!"

Cap ain Mayne Reid is not so busily occupied with his new magazine "Onward," and in weeping over the fortunes he so easily made and so lightly parted with, but that he finds time to write to the newspapers occasionally, and propose plans for public convenience.

His latest crotchet is in relation to the city railways, and he proposes a plan by which passengers, drivers, horses, and conductors might be indefinitely blessed. As the innovations he proposes would apply equally to Philadelphia as to this city, I retail them here.

He suggests that cars should be allowed to stop only at intervals of every four blocks, and that all passengers who may wish to get out, or pedestrians who may wish to get in, shall be accommodated only at these points. He recommends that stone platforms shall be erected at these intervals, high enough to be on a line with the platforms of the cars, so that passengers can pass from one to the other without any of that wading through mud and water and upheaval of the knees-joints which at present characterize their endeavors.

He claims that the greatest drag upon the horses is caused not by the load they are obliged to pull, but by the frequent stoppages and the immense strain consequent upon getting in motion again; and he shows (or thinks he shows) how such a saving of time would be had, by the adoption of his system, as to entirely supersede the necessity of an underground railroad.

Central Underground Railroad. So far from having been abandoned, has been ardently pursued during the last six months. Engineers have been making very careful surveys, and it is probable that a double tunnel will be excavated. Several European capitalists have offered to invest largely in the undertaking, and the President, Mr. William B. Ogden, gives the public the assurance that it will be commenced just as soon as the plans can be matured.

THERE IS GOOD AUTHORITY for stating that in this country one adult out of every six dies of Consumption; and, indeed, so prevalent and so fatal has this disease become, that it is dreaded as the great scourge of the race; and yet, in the formative stages, all Pulmonary Complaints may be readily controlled by resorting promptly to the EXPECTORANT OF DR. D. JAYNE, which soothes and strengthens the bronchial tubes, allays inflammation and cleanses them and the lungs of all impurities.
